Duquesne University Department of Psychology

is pleased to welcome

Donna Orange, Ph.D., PsyD

who will present 2013 Distinguished Speakers Workshop

Through phenomenology to the ethics of clinical hospitality

Location: Duquesne University, Parking is available in the garage on Forbes Ave.
Lecture time: Friday February 1, 2012: 6:00 – 9:00 p.m., room 105 College Hall
Workshop: Saturday February 2, 2012: 9:00 – 7:00 p.m., room 553 College Hall

Continuing education credits: Friday lecture only: 2.5 credits; whole workshop: 10 credits
Psychologists: Duquesne University is approved by the American Psychological Association to sponsor continuing education for psychologists. Duquesne University maintains responsibility for this program and its content.

Course Description
In this course we will examine together what challenges phenomenology, from its beginnings with Brentano and Husserl, through its hermeneutic turn in Heidegger, Gadamer, and Ricoeur, bring not only to the human sciences generally, but specifically to the clinical project and to the theory of therapeutic action. Assuming a large familiarity and receptivity in the Duquesne community to approaches alternative to mainstream reductionisms, we will move rapidly to the clinical implications, i.e. to the pragmatic and to the ethical. How does one actually respond otherwise once one sees and hears otherwise? What impact is the “ethical turn” having in contemporary psychoanalytic discourse and practice?

Our morning will conclude with a survey of the differences an ethical phenomenology makes to our clinical attitudes and practice.

Our afternoon will begin with a clinical demonstration, followed by a shared reflection on its connection to the phenomenology, hermeneutics, and ethics discussed in the morning.

Our day will conclude with a reading entitled “clinical hospitality” which draws on the work of Levinas, Derrida, and Ricoeur. All will be invited to contribute to final reflections on what we have learned together about working other-wise.

Learning objectives

1. By the end of this mini-course, participants will be able to distinguish between Husserlian, Heideggerian, and Levinasian sensibilities in clinical work.
2. By the end of this mini-course, participants will be able to state at least one impact the so-called “ethical turn” is having in contemporary psychoanalysis.
3. Participants will be able to state at least three clinical consequences of a Levinasian sensibility, and to form an opinion as to the extent to which these differ from the consequences of other phenomenological ideas.

Suggested reading includes:

Who may attend?
The Distinguished Speakers Workshop is open to the public and free for those not seeking CE credits. Participants can expect a combination of lecture, questions, and discussion, creating a cooperative and mutual learning experience.

Donna Orange, Ph.D., PsyD

Inquiries
Any inquiries should be directed to Marilyn Henline at 412-396-6520 or henline@duq.edu.

No charge for Duquesne University students with I.D., faculty and adjunct faculty, as well as anyone not wanting continuing educations credits.
Mission Statement of the Department of Psychology at Duquesne University

Internationally recognized for over three decades, the Psychology Department at Duquesne University engages in the systematic and rigorous articulation of psychology as a human science. The department understands psychology as a positive response to the challenges of the 21st century -- one which includes existentialism, phenomenology, hermeneutics, psychoanalysis and depth psychology, humanistic psychology, feminism, critical theory, post-structuralism, and a sensitivity to the diverse cultural contexts within which this response may find expression. Psychology as a human science pursues collaborative, qualitative research methods that pay special attention to what is particular to human beings and their worlds. Accordingly, the department educates psychologists who are sensitive to the multiple meanings of human life and who work toward the liberation and well-being of persons individually as well as in community.

Pre-registration form

Donna Orange, Ph.D., PsyD

The suffering stranger: Hermeneutics for everyday clinical practice and through phenomenology to the ethics of clinical hospitality

Name: (print).......................... Signed:..............................................................

Email Address: ...........................................................

Phone:........................................ Professional affiliation:..............................

Fees
Friday night’s lecture only: $20.00, Mini-course, including Friday: $120.00, $100.00 with pre-registration (by January 25, 2013)

Mail this form with check to Marilyn Henline, Duquesne University, Dept of Psychology, 544 College Hall, Pittsburgh, PA 15282-1753. Make check payable to Duquesne University. Your check is your receipt. Refunds available minus $10 cancellation fee until January 25, 2013.

We look forward to welcoming you to our campus and our program.