P&T Coaching: Approaching the Process with Confidence

Putting together your tenure and promotion packet is daunting. Not only do we have so much to prepare, but we must also answer fundamental questions about the type of teaching, scholarship, and service we feel called to do. This spring, CETR will be offering faculty preparing for tenure and/or promotion--especially those committed to community-engaged teaching and scholarship--the opportunity to receive coaching to help them approach the process with confidence.

Working with Craig Maier, Associate Professor of Communication & Rhetorical Studies and 2020-2021 Gaultier Fellow with expertise in coaching, you will meet 3-6 times throughout the spring once every two or three weeks at times that fit your schedule. The conversations won't focus on doing line-by-line readings of your personal statement, giving advice that doesn't fit, or making you feel anxious or guilty for not producing enough. Instead, we will focus on strengthening your sense of purpose, getting unstuck, and discovering how to put your best foot forward.
