Does College Affect Students? The Answer May Surprise You

2019 Higher Education Spring Lecture

It is assumed that the college years are a time of growth and discovery for students. Yet parents, faculty, and staff often wonder what kinds of environments and experiences make a meaningful—and positive—impact. You are invited to come hear Dr. Matthew J. Mayhew, William Ray and Marie Adamson Flesher Professor in Educational Administration at The Ohio State University, deliver the inaugural Higher Education Spring Lecture on the campus of Duquesne University.

- Monday, April 29, 2019
- 11:00 a.m. – Noon
- Duquesne Student Union
  Africa Room (3rd Floor)
  1000 Locust Ave, Pittsburgh, PA 15282
- RSVP
  The lecture is free and open to the public, but space is limited. Reserve your place now: higheredadmin@duq.edu

Sponsored by Duquesne University’s M.S. in Higher Education Administration, a 30-credit, online program designed to offer a broad, holistic understanding of university structures and operational areas. For more information, please visit duq.edu/highered
